The Easy Entry

It is often underestimated how complicated an online gaming venture can be. Read about what is required of a gaming provider and why an MGN Partnership is the right choice for you.

The design and development of a competitive and stable online gaming software can take years– not to mention lots in cash investments. When the software is completed, it would have to be deployed on server hardware. You would also need to find a reliable server hosting company that guarantees the security of your servers and provides enough bandwidth to power your gaming services. Even after the software is deployed, technical support must be provided and software must be continuously improved and updated. In order to accomplish these tasks, a skilled and experienced software development team would have to be assembled.

*only in conjunction with a Marketing Partnership

The same applies to the customer support team that must be available to serve the customers' requests – 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. The team of gaming professionals monitor the gaming tables and perform checks on new customers, they also perform the payment processing for every customer. It is no secret that competent, knowledgeable, and friendly customer support is a pillar in customer retention.

With each individual payment provider you would have to sign contracts and make deals, afterwards spending time integrating their payment systems into your gaming platform. This would mean months of work for the software development team before the first credit card, NETELLER, Moneybookers, Western Union, or bank transfer transaction could be completed.

Once the gaming system and the support team are ready, you would need to set up your gaming company. Due to legalities in many countries around the world, your gaming business can only be established in certain countries or jurisdictions. You would then have to apply for a Gaming License and have your system scrutinized and certified by the Gaming officials. It takes weeks to provide the required documentation and months to complete the entire process. After perhaps 1 year your gaming site would be up and running the way you had always imagined... maybe!
